At a special meeting held last Friday, the Mokena School Board unanimously agreed to rehire all of the teachers for the school year 1941-42.

The present faculty includes the following teachers: Principal, Gerald W. Dunn; High School and Music, Margaret Hennessey; Junior High School, Elizabeth Cappel; Intermediate Room, Eleanor Ferguson.

Last Friday, May 9th, the school was visited by Mr. Baker, State Supervisor and Louis Bottino, Will County Superintendent of schools. They reported that the modern equipment, the sanitary condition of the building, and the fine spirit shown by the teachers and students were outstanding among the many good qualities of the school system.

Nearer and Nearer

Beat the War Drums

The nation moved several steps closer to the brink of war when the House by vote of 266 to 120 passed a bill authorizing the President to seize and use as he might see fit, a hundred foreign merchant ships now in the United States harbors. Opponents of the measure declare that it is the final step into war. The bill now goes to the Senate and it is reported that Senator Tobey of New Hampshire will seek to have a "Anti-Convoys" provision inserted as an amendment to the bill. According to reports, the administration will have sufficient votes to defeat the Tobey proposal. Despite the desire of a great mass of citizens to stay out of war, we are being rushed head long into it. President Roosevelt once remarked "Convoys mean shooting and shooting means war." Apparently the Chief Executive has forgotten the words that he once uttered.

The crescendo of beating war drums reached a new high during the past week, when two members of the President's Cabinet and a White House Spokesman in the Senate virtually demanded that war be declared and our boys be thrown into the holocaust now raging across the sea. Well informed capital sources say that the President will soon declare ANOTHER EMERGENCY and that the "war boys" are peeved because the American people aren't responding to the efforts of the war mongers to inoculate the American public with the "war fever" germ.

NEW TRIAL FOR FORMER BREMEN SUPERVISOR MAY BE SET TODAY

Otto Ziebell, former Bremen Township supervisor, is scheduled to face Judge Walter J. LaBuy today, May 16, as the result of his conviction on April 22 on a conspiracy count in connection with the Bremen Township relief investigation.

Under the terms of the verdict returned by the jury at that time, the punishment, if any, is left up to the judge. It was indicated at the state attorneys office that the maximum penalty of a year in jail and a fine of $2000 will be asked.

James F. Bennette, who was bookkeeper in Ziebell's office and whose testimony helped convict Ziebell, pleaded guilty to the conspiracy charge but the judge has not yet passed judgement on him.

Assistant State's Attorney Julius L. Sherwin who was assigned to the case by State's Attorney Thomas Courtney, in recent months, did a masterful job in presenting the complicated case to the jury who returned a conviction within a few hours after obtaining the case.

Former Assistant State's Attorney Emmet M. Moynihan was barred from presenting the case as he led the earlier investigation and was himself called as a witness by Wm. Scott Stewart, Ziebell's lawyer. Moynihan told the jury that no promise had been given Ziebell in connection with getting Ziebell's original statement from him which Moynihan took.

Thomas G. Herndon, formerly a Midlothian merchant, who was held for seven months as a state's witness was not called to testify at the Ziebell trial but did help the state

Mr. and Mrs. Koehler have lived in Orland and Bremen townships all their married life and for the past 30 years have resided in the village of Orland Park.

Americas Hold World's Future, Industrialist Says

Wenner-Gren Urges U. S. To Assert Leadership In Realm of Ideas.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
NEW YORK.—"The future of the world lies in the future of the Americas, and all the means to provide freedom and progressive democracy for the rest of civilization are available right here in the Western hemisphere," according to a notable message delivered personally to Americans by Axel L. Wenner-Gren, outstanding Swedish industrialist-philanthropist, in a recent interview. Regarded as one of the rich men of the world and connected with the United States by former business ties, long-standing sentiment and marriage, the Swedish industrial leader advised Americans, "both North and South," to take stock of themselves and to recognize that "today is the Western hemisphere's hour of destiny."

Wenner-Gren, whose previous relations with the press have been featured by consistent Swedish reticence, started on his rise to riches following a study of U. S. commercial methods 33 years ago. Thereafter he carved out a remarkable though little known career. Even in Sweden he elicited little public attention till his name was published as the nation's largest individual taxpayer. He rose to this industrial pinnacle via development of a vacuum cleaner—inspiration for which was an American model seen by chance in a Vienna shop window—and a flame-fed refrigerator, perfected from the research of two young Swedish scientists. The third great source of his wealth is the Swedish Pulp company, occupying forest areas as large as the state of Connecticut.

Rescued Athenia Victims.

A year ago Wenner-Gren made news when his yacht, the Southern Cross, rescued 376 stricken passengers at the scene of the torpedoed Athenia tragedy; also, recently, when Prof. A. J. Meyer announced that he had "donated $150,000 for research designed to foster airplane engine supremacy for the United States."

In his significant message to the Americas, the tall, handsome Swede, erect and Nordic for all his 59 years, struck an earnest note. "I know America and Americans. I built my own successful enterprises largely on American techniques, learned by working in your factories and through association with business enterprises in the United States. I am married to an American girl, the former Marguerite Liggett of Kansas City—incidentally the only marriage of either of us. And I admire Americans and number hundreds of your citizens as my friends. But," he pointed out, "no matter what the course of the war, European countries are undoubtedly due for years of economic and cultural depression, their emergence from this depression dependent largely upon the way of life in the Americas. "The center of civilization in our Machine age," Wenner-Gren continued, "started to move toward the Western hemisphere the day the first mass-production shop was set up in New England or Detroit—perhaps before. Today, the United States is at its peak. Tomorrow, Canada and the Latin-American countries will have great, vital, dynamic civilizations and their strength will necessarily be the strength and inspiration of whatever civilization survives in the Old world."

New Incentives Needed.

"Americans," he warned, "can no longer afford to live snugly in the stuffiness of a rich national properity or the vacuum of isolation. Preparedness for national defense is, of course, vital and your peoples have decided upon what form that preparedness should take, but along with all of these vast undertakings America should and can assert its leadership in the realm of ideas.

"Americans must realize that it is not enough merely to try to preserve what is now held. They must establish new incentives. For instance, in their own hemisphere, they cannot let the share-croppers in North America and the forgotten peon populations of South America remain at miserable starvation levels, if only because these are fuel for subversive fires. The peoples of the New world must reach out towards new heights in health, housing, employment, interchange of ideas, practical techniques and co-operation. They must rouse all their energies and ingenuity to do this job—to bring our great machine civilization to the point where it can provide the good things of life for everybody, not only in the Americas, but also abroad. All of the resources in men, money and materials essential to this are at hand in the Americas. If they are utilized, then no matter how the victories of violence mount up, a new constructive world will inevitably replace those destructive forces."

Explains International Views.

With regard to his international status, the retired millionaire frankly said, "It has been vaguely rumored that I am in some way or other sympathetic with the ideologies which are now dominating most of the continent of Europe. I grant you that I shall always prefer peace to war so long as there is a reasonable basis for hoping for peace, but never at a sacrifice of the principles of freedom and progressive democracy."

"Anyone who has read my book, 'Call to Reason,' knows where I stand on these issues. Miss Inez Robb, who interviewed me a few months ago in Miami, wrote in reference to my views on democracy in this volume, 'It is doubly amazing if your author could ever have been labeled an enemy of everything he pleads for.' I think Miss Robb is an impartial critic, and I feel impelled to ask whether it would not be better sportsmanship if rumor-spreaders would also take the trouble to read what I have written and check up on my actual record before they indulge in silly innuendoes. I maintain now, as I have always maintained, that totalitarian concepts represent a retreat not only from humanitarian ideals but from reason. They are definitely not progressive because they use the tools and organization of the enlightened machine age in an effort to enforce principles worthy of the Stone age."

The retired Swedish industrialist, who is vividly American in his optimistic outlook, his blend of practical idealism and his generous attitude toward scientific and humanitarian causes, announced at the conclusion of his interview. "I wish to acknowledge the deep debt I feel towards America by more than the donations I have recently made for scientific research in various universities and by sponsoring the scientific expedition which recently discovered the 'lost' Inca cities in South America. I am therefore setting up the Viking fund in the United States for further grants in line with the ideas I have expressed here, because in these confused and shifting times, if I am sure of anything it is this—that the future of the world lies in the future of the Americas."

Experts Predict Aircraft Engines Of 8,000 H. P.

DAYTON, OHIO.—An 8,000-horsepower engine for an airplane—Fantastic? Not at all!

It may be several years away, but army air corps research experts at Wright field are already looking forward to the day when airplane power plants, delivering four times the power of the big 2,000-horsepower engines now being tested for the nation's newest warplanes, will be ready to go on the test stands. New power plant test equipment now being assembled at Wright field has been designed with this goal in mind, and when the big engines are ready, as engineers are confident they eventually will be, the equipment here will be heavy enough and strong enough to perform the necessary tests.

Aviation is a young industry, less than 40 years old, yet in the 37 years since the Wright brothers' first flight at Kittyhawk, N. C., aircraft engines have grown from the small, four-cylinder, water-cooled, 12-horsepower motor which turned twin propellers on the first Wright plane, to the big 18-cylinder 2,000-horsepower motors of today. And now the Wright field power plant laboratory is working in close co-operation with engine manufacturers to develop a practical 8,000 horsepower engine—and they earnestly believe it can be done.

Present-day engine developments are along two lines, the radial air-cooled type and the liquid-cooled type. Huge frontal areas of the air-cooled engines interfered seriously with clean aerodynamic design, whereas the liquid-cooled engines had far less frontal area to buck the air streams. Air-cooled engine manufacturers redesigned their engines to meet the challenge, until the newest air-cooled radial engines provide a diameter not far out of line with the diameters of liquid-cooled engines of comparable horsepower.

Removal of Tonsils May Be Harmful

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

I HAVE had the opportunity of examining the boys in three private preparatory schools and in one school where boys were of the underprivileged class. I found that the great majority of the boys in the private schools had had their tonsils removed, while the majority of the underprivileged boys still had their tonsils.

Today, physicians are not advising the removal of tonsils so readily as in previous years. The fact that tonsils are large or show white spots does not now mean removal. Where tonsils are large, show evidence of infection and the child has frequent sore throats, removal is advised. Infected tonsils are a liability as they can cause infection.

However, if tonsils are not infected, they are really assets to health as they act as filters and prevent harmful organisms from entering the blood. Thus tonsils have been likened to the strainer on a water tap. If the strainer is clean and free of dirt, it prevents dirt getting into the drinking water. If the strainer gets clogged with dirt, then some of this dirt can get into the drinking water and cause trouble.

Findings on Tonsil Removal.
At frequent intervals, Dr. Albert D. Kaiser, Rochester, N. Y., has been publishing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, his findings as to the effects of removal of tonsils on the health of the child. As chairman of the Section on Children's Diseases, he presents figures for the last 10 years. He finds that about 50 per cent of children today have their tonsils removed, which, in his opinion, is too large a percentage. From his findings he suggests:

Where tonsils are enlarged and frequently inflamed, giving rise to attacks of tonsillitis and enlargement of glands of neck, tonsils should be removed.

Where there are attacks of tonsillitis followed by rheumatic symptoms, tonsils should be removed.

Such infections as the common cold, middle ear and sinus are not usually prevented by removal of tonsils.

Remember, large tonsils should be removed if they are interfering with breathing.

Pros and Cons Of Pasteurization

THE headmaster of a preparatory school that obtained its milk from its farm was urged by parents to have the milk pasteurized.

In an attempt to get at the amount of loss of vitamins by pasteurization, the headmaster wrote various health departments and private chemists. From some he obtained figures showing only 5 to 10 per cent loss of vitamins by pasteurization and others as high as 50 per cent.

All replies admitted, however, that pasteurization made the milk safe to use, which could not be said of unpasteurized milk. The headmaster, after due consideration and in conference with his dietitian decided that safety was more important than food value, particularly in his school, because any loss in vitamins in the milk was more than made up by the great amount of fresh fruit and vegetables from the farm.

What are believed to be reliable figures about loss of vitamins by pasteurization (heating the milk) appeared recently in an editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association. From experiments in laboratories of high standing, the figures show that from 20 to 25 per cent of vitamin B1 (useful for tired nerves, lack of appetite, and rheumatism) vitamin C (which prevents scurvy) and iodine (which prevents early goiter) was lost by pasteurization. All the other nutritive or food substances of milk are apparently not affected by pasteurization.

From the above it can be seen that those who have maintained that pasteurization destroys some of the vitamins are correct, but the loss, 20 to 25 per cent, is not as important as the safety of the milk. As Dr. Gilman Thompson pointed out some years ago, unclean milk causes more illness than any other one thing.

Two-Year-Old Boy Talks Greek and English Fluently

He Acts as an Interpreter When His Grandmother And Aunt Visit.

CHICAGO.—When grandmother, who comes from Greece, and Aunt Mabel, who knows only English, visit each other they have to have an interpreter. So Mickey does the job, although he's not yet three years old.

Mickey is Michael Bakalis. His grandmother is Mrs. Veneta Sikokis, with whom he lives, and his aunt is Mrs. Michael Bakalis.

Ever since he was 15 months old Mickey has been interpreting the conversation between his aunt and his grandmother. He learned to speak Greek as early as English—which was at the age of 15 months.

"Now," says his aunt, "we depend on Mickey to act as interpreter when we three are alone."

Unaware of Accomplishment.

The little fellow is unaware of his unusual accomplishment. As far as he is concerned it's only normal for a two-year-old boy to speak two languages well and be able to translate one into another.

His unusual gift was first noticed when Mickey asked his uncle, who was visiting him, for a drink of water. He made the request in Greek and the uncle couldn't understand him.

"Thelo ena potiri nero," was about the first Greek sentence the youngster said. "That means, 'I want a glass of water,'" he explained.

From that point on he mastered both languages with amazing facility. Now he is the perfect interpreter for his aunt and grandmother.

Doesn't Tire as Interpreter.

He appears to be able to express himself with the ability of one much older. This is true whether he is speaking in Greek or English. He doesn't tire of his job as interpreter and for an hour at a time may put what his grandmother says into English for his aunt and translate what his aunt says into Greek for his grandmother.

Mickey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bakalis. His parents speak both Greek and English, so he can get assistance if he needs it, but so far he hasn't fallen down on the job.

His mother says he carries on a childlike conversation with his toy animals in both languages, often talking to his toy bear in Greek and his toy dog in English.

Mickey had two uncles fighting for Greece. One was killed in action a few weeks ago. The other is still a soldier for the gallant little nation in the European trouble zone.

Prisoner Drunk in Court, Judge Changes Decision

DETROIT.—Things were looking up for Alex Lundy until he stepped down from a traffic court witness stand.

Lundy, found innocent by Judge George T. Murphy of a charge of driving while intoxicated, stumbled and almost fell.

"Come back here. I want to talk to you," ordered Judge Murphy. "Why, you're drunk now!" the court snapped indignantly a moment later.

Lundy, sentenced to 10 days in jail for contempt of court, looked up at the bench.

"When do I get my driver's license back, judge?" he asked.

"In a hundred years!" the court replied. "I will recommend permanent revocation."

St. Bernard True to Name

In the Face of Disgrace

CINCINNATI.—Bad Girl, 175-pound St. Bernard, is a show dog, but parading comes second when there's rescue work to be done.

Miss Anna Marie Schmidt didn't understand when Bad Girl tugged her leash. Anna tugged back, the leash broke and the two-year-old St. Bernard leaped a roadside wall and plunged down a 40-foot embankment.

Bad Girl ignored her mistress' calls and backed up the slope carrying a starving German Shepherd puppy whining in a basket. Another puppy in the basket was dead.

Diplomacy Pays Tipsy Visitor; Case Dismissed

LEXINGTON, KY.—The defendant in police court was a resident of another part of the state.

The officer who arrested him for intoxication spoke up:

"Judge, I think you ought to give this man a break. When I arrested him he explained that Lexington whisky was so much better than what he was used to getting at home he just got too much before he knew it."

The court agreed and dismissed the charge.

PLAINVIEW, TEXAS.—Wanda Adams suddenly remembered she had left a package at a store, and stepped out of her car to go back and get it. Instead she went to the hospital. She had forgotten that at the time the car was at the top of a hydraulic grease rack.

Arnold, battling with O. P. M., declares sulphuric acid pool violates anti-trust laws... Congress considers advisability of lowering income tax exemptions.

WASHINGTON.—Thurman Arnold, the assistant attorney general with such zeal for trust busting, is battling with OPM and the war department again on a question involving national defense, and personal feeling is running very high.

This is not the first time Arnold has injected himself into a situation involving army and navy plans since William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman were put at the head of O. P. M., but it may easily be the straw that breaks the camel's back, for various officials concerned with the defense setup are getting ready for a showdown with the President as to whether he will call Arnold off or not.

The present row is over sulphuric acid, vital to the manufacture of explosives, but also to steel and fertilizer. The army, navy, OPM and manufacturers had worked out a pooling arrangement which was highly satisfactory to all concerned until Arnold heard about it.

He insisted that this arrangement was in conflict with the anti-trust laws, and threatened to prosecute the companies concerned if they attempted to operate under it. He was told by OPM, the army and the navy that this pooling agreement would hurt nobody, that it was vital to the defense program and would speed up production tremendously.

Arnold could not see why it was necessary, in order to get production of sufficient sulphuric acid quickly, that there should be any pooling agreement. He wanted open competition in its manufacture.

He insisted that he had gone very carefully into the pooling agreement as proposed, and that he calculated this pooling agreement would cost the farmers of the United States $8,000,000 a year.

This is vigorously denied by the army, navy and OPM experts, but some officials are saying that even if it were true it is a very trivial matter. They insist that $8,000,000 is nothing on a $30,000,000 national defense program, which will be slowed down if this carping about the pooling agreement being a violation of the anti-trust law continues.

Consider Lowering Income Tax Exemptions
There is a strong disposition on Capitol Hill not to lower the income tax exemptions, despite the pressing need for every dollar that can be raised. There are two motives for resisting the change. One is economy. It will cost as much to handle the small income group returns—meaning from those persons who at present do not have to make any—as the resulting revenue will produce.

The other reason is purely political. There is no desire on the part of congressmen to build up resentments. Moreover, the treasury scale of tax increases is accomplishing the ends always desired when most people advocate reduction of exemptions without doing it. The point is that from the treasury standpoint the only desirable point about reducing exemptions in the income tax schedules is not to get more people to pay taxes, but to make those already paying taxes pay more. A reduction of $500 in the exemption, obviously, not only makes more people fill out income tax blanks, but it adds $500 to the taxable income of every person now paying taxes.

The treasury has so coldly stepped up the percentages, and at such comparatively low figures, that this objective is no longer important. Besides, the treasury has always been more realistic than congress about the very high brackets. The treasury experts have always known, from experience, that as soon as the government begins taking more than three-quarters of an income—in the top brackets of course—the income tax payer in question loses a great deal of incentive so far as making any more money is concerned.

If the income tax exemptions are not lowered, and this is the present prospect, there is not going to be any greater realization on the part of the small income tax group that big government spending DOES take a toll from them. They are going to keep right on thinking that it does not make much difference to them personally what taxes are, because the rich are going to pay them—but they overlook the "hidden" taxes on such items as cigarettes and playing cards.

Improved Conditions Become Widespread

Improving conditions in the U. S. during the month of May are indicated by the above map. Farm income is slowly but steadily rising. Volume of trade is at a peak 15 per cent higher than last year as larger pay rolls boost buying power.

By L. G. ELLIOTT
President, LaSalle Extension University

The influence of rising pay rolls in industry continues to be reflected in increased purchasing power of consumers. Production of factories is 20 per cent higher than a year ago, and retail sales are up about 15 per cent. The trend in nearly all lines is upward.

The beginning of the new growing season finds farm conditions favorable. Good crops are anticipated, and prices are expected to average higher than last year. Total farm income is now running several per cent above a year ago, and is expected to show still further gains.

The expanded program of the department of agriculture encourages larger production of some farm products and supports prices, thus providing a further stimulus to improving conditions. Farmers raising hogs, poultry, and those producing dairy products will be most favorably affected by the new program, but all farmers will feel beneficial effects.

THE SMOKY YEARS

By ALAN LE MAY W.N.U. Release

INSTALLMENT 10 THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lew Gordon had built up a vast string of ranches in the West. King was killed by his powerful and unscrupulous competitor, Ben Thorpe. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, was determined to avenge his death in spite of opposition.

But now the scar-mouthed man spoke suddenly; from his position at one side he had dared flick his eyes to the door. "Walk, look out! Don't turn! Watch this buzzard, but wheel back and stand by me!"

Into the front of the bar two men had come; they came striding back the length of the room; their spurs ringing brokenly. Roper did not see their guns come out. But suddenly the weapons of both of them appeared in their hands, smoothly and easily, from no place.

The two men were Lee Harnish and Tex Long.

Tex Long's .45 clicked in the palm of his hand as it came to full cock. He said, "Howdy, Bill. A spic girl just brought us word. Dave Shannon and Hat Crick Tommy are up the street. And Dry Camp Pierce."

"Gosh," Lee Harnish said, "we've been hunting you for two months! You want us to blast these Indians, boss?"

Bill Roper drew a deep breath, and grinned. At first he could not even appreciate that here, at last, were the leaders he needed for his great raid. All he could think of was that he had been relieved from certain death; and he knew that life was good.

CHAPTER XIV

The tribute implied by the re-gathering of the wild bunch leaders was one of the most extraordinary things that had ever happened in Bill Roper's life. There was not much to their story. Driven out of Texas on the eve of Bill Roper's victory, for a while they had gone their separate ways. But gradually they had drifted together again, in the Indian nations, at Dodge, in the northern cow camps. With Cleve Tanner broken in Texas, and the roots cut from under Ben Thorpe's organization by the loss of his breeding grounds, the outlaw riders found themselves unwilling to leave their work unfinished. So at last they had come looking for Roper—and had found him.

The first thing was to get them out of there. He named as rendezvous a lonely shanty on Fork Creek.

Roper himself was the last to ride out of Miles City. Seasoned night riders though these men might be, with names now famous the length of the trail, most of them were youngsters still. No one of them could be trusted not to get a skunk of liquor, and go gunning for Lasham's men on his own hook.

Roper was relieved, therefore, upon riding into the Fork Creek rendezvous in the dreary February twilight, to find his Texas men already waiting for him there. They were eating fresh beef, but not their own, as Roper came into the little cabin, stamping the snow off his boots.

Lee Harnish looked sheepish. "Say, I forgot something. I got a letter for you here."

Roper took the worn envelope and stood turning it over in his hands. The date showed it to be three weeks old—no great age, everything considered. But what took hold of him, so that for a full minute he dared not break the seal, was that the letter was from Jody Gordon.

Roper ripped open the envelope. The whole note covered no more than half a page; but as he folded it and put it into a pocket, his hands were shaking in a way that would have cost him his life if he had been walking into a gunfight then. There was a long silence.

With a visible effort, Roper pulled himself together. Briefly he told them what his new wild bunch had done.

"But we haven't even scratched the surface," he finished. "Unless we hit Walk Lasham quick and hard, Thorpe will get his balance again, and reach his roots back into Texas; and all the work we did down there will go for nothing."

"Me," Tex Long said, "I aim to swing with you, and try to finish up what we begun. But, way I see it, the layout up here is terrible bad, for our style of work."

"There isn't any profit in the way I figured," Roper admitted. "I've been taking a passay up along the Canadian border; I figure it's an easy drive. If you criminals are willing to come on and take one more crack at Thorpe and Lasham—"

"There's no one beyond the border that's needing any stock," Dry Camp Pierce said gloomily.

"Dry Camp," Bill Roper said, "I'm thinking of the tribes."

There was a moment's silence. "Granting that Canada's full of war paint," Tex Long said; "how the devil—"

"I've talked to Iron Dog."

Every one of them, each in his own way, pricked up his ears at that. Iron Dog was a famous warrior chief of the Gros Ventre Sioux. Ragged and starving, his decimated band driven far out of their home country, Iron Dog no longer was the stubbornly resisting force which had once made his name. But though he was broken and helpless now, remnants of his leadership remained; his influence extended over many bands, and more than one tribe.

"I don't hold with dealing with red niggers, much," Dave Shannon said. "These bucks are forced out of their ranges without any deal made whereby they get fed," Roper said. "Half of them are in as pitiful a state of starvation as you ever saw. A big part of the blame for that is on Walk Lasham. Now I aim to square the deal."

"I already made us a rendezvous with Iron Dog, before I knew you were in on this," Bill Roper told them now. "Inside of a month Iron Dog will be camped on the Milk River with anyway seven or eight bands."

"Seven or eight bands!" Tex Long shouted at him. "My God, there'll be worse than a thousand Indians on the Milk!"

"A thousand, hell!" Roper said. "If there aren't that many buck warriors alone, I'll eat the beef myself!"

The men in this little cabin were not easily surprised, and less easily shocked or awed; but their usually unrevealing faces now gave them away.

"God Almighty!" Dave Shannon said. It was almost a prayer.

"He's done it now," Hat Crick Tommy said slowly. "You know

"Now I aim to square the deal."

what happens when you throw that many loose Indians together? You got a war on your hands, by God! They'll come whooping down Montana—they'll tear the country wide open! The whole frontier will go up in a bust of smoke. Nothing'll ever stop 'em, once they get together like that!"

"One thing will," "What will?" "Grub," said Roper. "That might be so," Dave Shannon admitted. "I never yet see an Indian go to war on a full stomach."

A tensy had come into that dark cabin; they were realizing now that they stood in the shadow of events of a magnitude they had not dreamed. In the quiet, Bill Roper's hands kept creasing and recreasing the letter from Jody Gordon. A faint dampness showed on his forehead, but his fingers acted cold and awkward.

"There's five of us here," Tex Long said. "You expect us to just suddenly feed every Indian in creation?"

"I've got twenty-seven riders waiting to throw in with us at the first word."

"Twenty-seven riders? Where?" "All over Montana. What do you think I did all winter? Holed up like a she-bear?"

Silence again, while they all studied Roper.

"How many you figure to move?" Tex Long asked at last.

Roper's voice was so low they could hardly hear his words. "Between twenty and thirty thousand head."

Tex Long threw his hat against the roof poles in a gesture of complete impatience. "Dead of winter," he said; "maybe having to fight part of the time; why, thirty-fourty cowboys couldn't drive—"

"We don't have to handle this stock like fat beef," Roper reminded him. "We don't have to pull up for quicksand, or stampede losses, or high water. If a hundred head get swept down a river, what the hell? Some different Indians will get hold of 'em downstream. Working that way, hard and fast, thirty cowboys can move every head in Montana!"

"We're terrible short of time," Tex Long said.

"I know it; in another couple of ride 500 miles to warn him. Walk Lasham, manager of Thorpe's holdings in Montana, saw Roper sitting alone and unarmed in a saloon one day. Gun in hand, Lasham prepared to kill his hated antagonist who was leading the rustler's war.

months their chuck wagons will be heading out, and the deep grass will be full of their riders. We have to move and move quick."

"It might be," Dry Camp Pierce declared himself, "it just could be done." A hard gleam was coming into the old rustler's wary eyes. "And if it can—great God! There's never been nothing like this!"

The others seemed to have had the breath knocked out of them by the unheard-of scope, the bold daring, the headlong all-or-nothing character of the plan.

"This is bigger than the Texas raids," Tex Long said wonderingly. "This is bigger than anything has ever been!"

Suddenly Dave Shannon smacked his thigh with his huge hand. "By God, I believe it'll bust 'em!"

Over the pack of outlawed youngsters had come a wave of that fanatic enthusiasm which sometimes sways men as they face the impossible, but Roper, strangely, was unable to share it. The great raid he had planned all winter now seemed futile—a plan senseless and cold.

"Bill," said Lee Harnish, "what's the matter with you? You got chills and fever, or something?"

Roper spoke to Harnish alone, as if he had forgotten the others. "That letter was from Jody Gordon," he said.

"Bad news, son?" "I don't know. She wants me to come to Ogallala."

"When?" "Now—right away."

"What for? Does she say?" "She says she needs me; she says she needs me bad, and right away. I guess she does, all right. If she didn't, I don't believe she'd ever write to me."

The faces of the wild bunch riders were expressionless, noncommittal; Roper knew they wouldn't have much to say. They were youngsters still—all except Pierce; but their faces were carved lean and hard by long riding, and a lot of that riding had been for him.

He stood up, shaking his shoulders. "Catch up your ponies."

"We pulling out? Tonight yet?" "You bet your life we are. Ought to make Red Horse Springs by midnight."

"And after that," Harnish said slowly, "what is it, Bill? Is it Ogallala?"

Once more the silence, while they waited for Bill.

"It's the raid," Roper said.

CHAPTER XV

Lew Gordon came stumping across the corral of his little Miles City house, his spurs ringing at every stride. His big hands, rope-hardened and thickened at the knuckles, swung loose at his sides; but his face had the look of a man beset.

Opening the back door of the house he sent a great roar through the walls—"Jody! Jody, where are you?"

She answered him, and Lew Gordon went to find her.

"What's the meaning of this?" was his greeting as his daughter came running to him through the house. "You were supposed to stay in Ogallala!"

Jody threw her arms about his neck and pulled his head down to kiss him; but Lew Gordon was not to be put off.

"That horse wrangler just brought me word that you was here," he said. "There's a pretty kettle of soap, when some horse wrangler knows more about where a man's daughter is at than he knows himself!"

"Dad, will you please sit down? I tell you, I want to talk to you!"

"Oh, all right," Lew Gordon flopped into a chair, jabbed his spurs into the floor at long range, and tore off another huge mouthful of beef.

"There are two pieces of bad news," Jody said now. "First thing, Ben Thorpe has cut under us in the bidding for the government contracts, at Dodge."

A spark leaped into Lew Gordon's eyes; under the pressure of the last two years he had turned edgy and garrulous, as if his mind had become hasty on the trigger, now that his hands were idle. "I might have known it!" his big voice boomed. "Those infernal—"

"The loss of those contracts is going to hurt," Jody said; "I've brought the books up into fat shape, and it looks to me as if King-Gordon is starting the worst year in history. If the losses go on piling up the way they are—"

Jody Gordon came and sat on the arm of her father's chair. "There was a man rode up to Ogallala from Dodge City," she said. "He brought some very peculiar news, and I don't like it at all."

"This was a Bill Roper man," Jody said.

Lew Gordon checked as suddenly as if he had been struck across the face.

BROADENING CHRISTIAN HORIZONS: SAUL'S CONVERSION

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:1-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision.—Acts 26:19.

The conversion of Saul is recognized as one of the outstanding events in Bible history. When two brilliant English lawyers, Lord Lytton and Sir Gilbert West, set out to disprove the truth of Christianity, they selected the resurrection of Christ and the story of Paul's conversion as the focal points of their proof. Working independently, they then came together to compare notes, and found that they had both become Christians as they had become convinced of the truth of the Scriptures.

The two events may well stand together as mighty evidence for Christianity, for only on the ground of regeneration can the change in Saul be accounted for, and only on the assurance that he met the risen Christ on the Damascus road can we account for his conversion. This is a great lesson, let us make the very most of it.

I. Saul, a Bold Persecutor (vv. 1, 2).

As our lesson opens we find the brilliant and zealous young Jew, Saul, "yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord." The persecutions in Jerusalem had practically wiped out the church in that city, but had scattered the disciples abroad, and thus the witness had been spread. The death of the godly Stephen, to which Saul had given his approval, had only increased his determination to destroy those who were "of the way" of Jesus. Looking for new fields to conquer, he carried with him to Damascus letters from the high priest at Jerusalem, giving him authority to imprison the followers of Christ. But on the way he met Christ Himself, and was stricken to the earth.

II. Saul, a Convicted Sinner (vv. 3-9).

Stricken down by a brilliant heavenly light, he finds himself talking to the Lord Jesus. He hears from His holy lips the solemn indictment of those who persecute God's people—"Why persecutest thou me?" He who lays unkind hands upon, or brings untrue accusation against, God's children had best beware, for so closely is our Lord identified with His people that when they suffer, it is He who bears the hurt.

In a single sentence the Lord disposes of the persecuting zeal and the sinful skepticism of this proud young Pharisee, and Saul enters into Damascus not as the haughty persecutor, but as a man trembling and astonished. He spends three days shut in with his own soul and God, not seeing, not caring to eat, but entering into communion with God. By God's grace the old life is pulled up by the roots as it is displaced by the new life in Christ Jesus.

III. Ananias, an Obedient Disciple (vv. 10-12).

Ananias was the "I am here, Lord" type of Christian to whom the Lord could confidently commit His important business. All we know of him is what is contained in this chapter, but it is a very beautiful and enviable record. God is able to work directly on any human soul and accomplish His end (as He did with Saul on the Damascus road), but His usual manner of working is through faithful human agencies.

One wonders how much would be accomplished for God if every Christian were as willing and ready as was Ananias to do the Lord's bidding in seeking out and helping a struggling soul.

The greatest of all Christian leaders, the apostle Paul, was led out into his life of loyalty and service to Christ by a humble layman. Repeatedly God's Word by precept and example stresses the vital importance of personal work on the part of laymen and women. The leaders of Christian work during the coming generation are now in the Sunday school classes of our churches, perhaps in a little wayside chapel in the country, in the village church, in the mission or settlement house, or in the great city church.

IV. Saul, a Chosen Witness (vv. 15, 16).

The fears of Ananias that Saul might still be a worker of evil (v. 13) were soon overcome by God's assurance that in the praying Saul He had prepared for Himself "a chosen vessel" (v. 15) to bear the gospel to the Gentiles and to kings, as well as to Israel.

The great witness of Saul was to be accompanied by great suffering. How often the two go together, and both may be (as they were in Paul's life) for God's glory. Saul knew nothing of that subtle hypocrisy known as being "a secret believer," for at once he made open confession of his faith in baptism, and "straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues that he is the Son of God" (v. 20).

Opal Once 'Lucky'

The opal is the only gem that has had its "luck" changed by a work of fiction. It was worn as a good-luck charm until Sir Walter Scott, in his "Anne of Geierstein," introduced it as an unlucky stone, inviting misfortune and unhappiness to the owner. Since that time the gem has been branded as unlucky, and superstitious people have refused to wear it.

METHODIST CHURCH NEWS

The regular meeting of the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Tinley Park Methodist Church was held May 7th in the church social hall. Rev. Weinreich gave an interesting talk during the devotionals.

After a short business session, the president, Mrs. Ada Schellhase turned the meeting over to the general program chairman, Mrs. Trudie Swisher who in turn introduced Mrs. Rosa Stover who built her program around Mother's Day. The joys, responsibilities and the little heart aches carried thru the years, from the coming of the new baby until the child had reached maturity, was cleverly depicted in song and verse.

At the climax of the afternoon, the group gathered around a tea table beautifully decorated with baskets of flowers at which Mrs. Schellhase and Mrs. Swisher presided.

As a special token to all mothers present and their guests, Mrs. Lahti presented each with a small crocheted basket containing home made candy. Mrs. Lahti, tho a busy mother, made each of these baskets. Delicious refreshments were served.

This was an afternoon long to be remembered by all who attended.

Mrs. Wm. Stockman entertained the Smiling Thru bunco club in her home Thursday.

Riverview Park
Opens May 14

Riverview Park, Chicago's only amusement park and the largest outdoor amusement center in the country, opens its 1941 season Wednesday afternoon May 14.

Park President Geo. A. Schmidt estimates that more than a quarter of a million dollars has been spent to prepare Riverview's 142 acres of rides, shows, picnic groves and attractions for its 38th consecutive season. Over 18,000 gallons of paint alone, was used on the ride and show structures bordering the three mile midway. Landscape gardeners recently finished a month-long task of pruning, trimming and preparing Riverview's beautiful shade trees, shrubbery and flower gardens for the new season.

In the ride and attraction division, Riverview presents the same popular and thrilling attractions as last year. Features of the season will be the twenty-story "Pair-O-Chutes", the eighty-foot double ferris wheel and the coaster rides headed by the world's speediest ride, "The Bobs". Others are "Flying Scooters", "Flying Turns", "Rocket Ships", "Chutes", "Silver Flash", and more than 100 other attractions. The miniature train, "Kiddyland", "Merry-Go-Round" and other ground rides are ready and waiting for the scores of youngsters who will enjoy them again this season.

Riverview's popular bargain matinees and evenings will prevail again this season. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays will be two-cent days and Tuesday and Thursday evenings will be 5c nights.

As an added feature Geo. Schmidt has made Saturday afternoons 2c days for the children until the city schools close in June.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Adam and Fallen Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday,
May 11.

The Golden Text was, "If by one man's offence death reigned by one;
much more they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ" (Romans 5:17).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (II Timothy 3:16, 17).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook,
"Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:
"Christian Science separates error from truth, and breathes through the sacred pages the spiritual sense of life, substance, and intelligence. In this Science, we discover man in the image and likeness of God. We see that man has never lost his spiritual estate and his eternal harmony" (p.
548).

ORLAND PARK WOMAN'S CLUB NEWS

On Thursday, May 8, the Orland Park Woman's club held their annual Spring luncheon at Big Run Country club, where they enjoyed a delicious luncheon and spent a very enjoyable afternoon.

Attending the luncheon besides members and guests of the club, were the following officers of the Third District: Mrs. W. M. Rennie, new president; Mrs. Robt. S. Houts, retiring literature chairman; Mrs. Hodgman, new literature chairman and Mrs. Lambin, music chairman.

Mrs. Rennie gave a very inspiring talk about the need of Woman's club work in our country today, and stressed the need of each one of us to obtain a sane and intelligent knowledge of conditions in the world today, and to know how to meet them. She reminded us that women of today must learn how to cope with the emotional upsets and crisis that may arise, and while we should not be indifferent to them, still we must preserve our sense of equilibrium if we are to face squarely the demands that may be made upon us.

Mrs. Chas. Maddox, retiring president, then turned the gavel over to the new president, Mrs. Stuart Loebe, and Mrs. Loebe accepted it saying that she would do her utmost to live up to what was expected of her. She also paid tribute to Mrs. Maddox and spoke of the fine leadership and numerous responsibilities which she had shouldered in the past two years.

Mrs. Roxie Brown, program chairman, introduced Mrs. Adele Cooper and her choral club, who sang the following selections: "Awake, 'tis Spring; Swallows to Southward and Ma Curly Headed Baby."

Mrs. Houts then gave a very interesting book review on "Quietly My Captain Waits."

This luncheon rounded up the regular meetings for the Club year of 1940. In the fall when the club reconvenes it is hoped there will be many new faces present, for new members are always welcome.

The red cross work being done by the club will still be carried on thruout the summer. Mrs. Harold Kinney, who has capably managed the work, will continue to be in charge. Those willing to help for a good cause please let Mrs. Kinney know and you may sew with the group or take work to do in your home, or if you prefer you may take knittink as so many are doing take knittink as so many are doing terials and very simple directions are furnished with all this work, so no one need be an expert to serve in any way. Your cooperation is invited and appreciated and it will all go to give Orland Park a good record with the Red Cross, besides giving us the feeling of personal satisfaction that only comes from the accomplishment of a good deed well done.

29 MILLION!

A record never before approached!

★When the 29,000,000th Ford rolled recently from the assembly line, an all-time record for the industry was set. 29,000,000 units built by the same management and all bearing one name—a name that has become one of the best-known trade-marks in the world!

It is significant that this achievement comes at a time when our country is making a mighty effort to re-arm swiftly. For to further that effort, to help speed it along in any possible way, we have offered the vast facilities of the Rouge Plant and every ounce of our experience.

As you read this, a new $21,000,000 Ford airplane engine plant, started only last fall, is nearly completed. A new magnesium alloy plant, one of the few in the country, is already in production on lightweight airplane engine castings. Work is right now under way on a new $18,000,000 plant for mass production of big bomber assemblies. Orders have been filled for military vehicles of several types, including army reconnaissance cars, staff cars and bomb service trucks.

In the midst of this activity for National Defense, building the 29 millionth Ford car is simply one part of the day's work.

The public has acclaimed the 1941 Ford car as the finest in Ford history. Ford Dealers are enjoying their greatest sales and expecting their best year since 1937.

It is good to be producing the things America needs, and to be setting records on the way!

Beat the Rush to Beat the Heat!

Make Air Conditioning Plans Now for homes — offices — businesses

Every year it's the same familiar story! During winter and spring months people think about air conditioning, but very few do anything about it.

They wait—put it off—until the first heat wave. Then, they want action—right away—and this is not always possible.

This year all signs indicate that air conditioning is going to be more popular than ever before. More people are going to want it—but unless they make plans now, there may be some unavoidable delays.

So—a word of warning. If you are considering any form of air conditioning—an electric room cooler—a night air cooling system—a compact store cooler—or a complete system for your business, office, or home—don't wait. Beat the rush to beat the heat—ACT NOW!

Just what equipment you need can best be determined by an experienced air conditioning engineer. Our engineers, with a background of experience and constant study of new developments in air conditioning, will be glad to consult with you, study your individual problems, furnish practical cost estimates—and put you in touch with qualified air conditioning dealers.

We invite any inquiries you may have.

PALOS PARK

Dorothy Robson

A great many people of Palos Park attended the Golden Wedding celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Gebhardt Koehler, Goodings Grove dande hall last Saturday night. Dorothy Robson was one of the soloists, singing "We've Come A Long Way Together". Everyone enjoyed the wonderful program, followed by refreshments and dancing. It is, justly so, a time for celebration when two people have been married for fifty years and have had good health. We wish them continued health and happiness in the remaining years ahead of them.

Mrs. Inez McLaughlin and Mrs. Margaret Walters of Chicago spent Monday at the home of Agnes and Janet Weir.

Buddy Braasch has just recovered from an attack of the measles.

Quite a few members of the Palos-Lemont Home Bureau attended the all day meeting of the Club held at the Blue Island Community High School Library Tuesday, May 13. The project was on how to make Slip Covers and great interest was shown by all who attended. The topic for discussion at the monthly meeting of local group, held last Friday at the home of Mrs. Dan McAllister was "Vegetables and Health."

Mrs. Jessie L. Mains is a patient at the Woodlawn Hospital in Chicago recovering from a cataract operation. She is improving steadily, and is expected home the last of the week.

Mrs. Jennie Kopf, who has been a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Powell, has gone to spend a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Ted Willard in Joliet.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Powell and Beverly Powell spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Lowry in Midlothian.

The pupils of McCord and Weir Schools are preparing their graduation programs. Buddy Braasch is the only graduate from McCord School, and Gordon Powell and August Ziebell from Weir school. Their programs are to be held the first week in June.

Now that warm days have come horse-back riding is all the go. Twenty girls from Roseland Junior College will hold a breakfast ride at 7 o'clock Saturday morning at Pete Rink's Riding Academy. On Friday night Father Murray of Chicago will entertain forty children with supper at the Hugh Kinney home followed by a hay rack party at Rink's.

POPULAR 3-RING CIRCUS SOON TO APPEAR IN THIS VICINITY.

Circus Day with its perennial appeal to all ages will be the center of attraction for people of this vicinity when Russell Bros.' 3-Ring Circus appears in two performances, afternoon and night at Blue Island, Tuesday May 20.

Russell Bros., one of the most popular of the larger and better circuses still on the road, has succeeded in effectively combining all the cherished circus traditions of old with the latest modern trends and improvements. Its eventful two-hour program, presented in a colorful big top of "cucumber green", abounds with novel surprises and interesting innovations.

An all-new array of performing talent is being offered, including some of circuses' top-rank flying trapeze artists, acrobats, tumblers, jugglers, tight-wire performers, equestrians and clowns, while in the animal department are marvelously trained performing elephants, unusually fine horses and various other species of four-footed entertainers.

Performances will start at 2 and 8 p. m. with the front doors opening one hour earlier. A complete collection of rare and costly wild animals from all parts of the world will be displayed in the menagerie at no extra cost to circus patrons, and in addition to the main big show performance there will be an exciting, fast-moving wild west show and a tented museum of human oddities and exotic entertainers.

The Smear Campaign Is On

Well informed capital sources report that the recent reference made by a person high in the affairs of our nation, wherein a well known American was referred to as a "Copperhead" is the opening gun of what is to be the greatest "Smear" campaign in our nation's history. All members of the Senate and the House of Representatives and all private citizens who oppose the entry of our nation into the war are to be flayed and instigated by the war crowd. Any public officer or citizen who raises a voice against our participation in the war is to be termed a "Copperhead", "an appeaser", "a renegade", "a Nazi sympathizer", and "Un-American."

By this means the "War boys" believe that they can force the American Public into approving the entry of the United States into the war. Their theory is, that the American Public will be afraid to raise their voice against war, if the threat of the "Smear is held over their heads".

We believe that the swivel chair warriors are guessing wrong and that they are going to have a difficult time in arousing the American people to a point where they will countenance war. Eighty percent of the American people are opposed to war and the threat of being "Smeared" unless they change their view points, isn't going to make them do so.

The American people don't want another war. They remember the dead, the maimed, and the gassed of the last one.

CARD OF THANKS

We sincerely thank our many friends for their presence and well wishes at our golden wedding celebration. Also for the many tokens of remembrance.

MR. AND MRS. GEBBHARDT KOEHLER

SCHOOL NEWS

The Red Cross work which began the first of the year under the sponsorship of Miss Ruth Hull has just held its last session.

The most regular members were Bernice Danaher, Anna Mae Butler, Joyce Beagley, Margaret Creveling, Mae Creveling, Bernice Enders, Lois Maddox, La Verne Sucharski, and Lois Wozniak. Many who started the class had to drop out because of play practice.

The class folded hundreds of large and small bandages for the Municipal Tuberculosis Sanitarium and soldiers camps and hospitals. The Red Cross is very particular about the work, but was well pleased with the work of the Orland students and very appreciative. Mrs. Stevens, the supervisor of the unit from which supplies were obtained, was very grateful and says we may have saved many lives by our little contribution of a half hour a week. Even tho the group has disbanded several of the group will continue folding badges after school and some of the girls in sewing class will continue making baby clothes.

Mr. Betts passed his final oral examination for his masters degree at Northwestern last Saturday.

At the last meeting of the Board of School Directors, all the teachers were re-hired for the coming year and a decision was made to reward summer school study with an increase in salary.

The Student Council is conducting a magazine cleanup campaign to be sure that all Orland residents are acquainted with the High School Magazine Subscription Service.

The amount collected in the campaign so far is $117.85. The five leading salesmen are: Bob Hewson, Jack Schlosser, Jack Jedlika, Eleanor Cooper and Norman Jorgensen. The commissions to date are $27.22.

Our latest special offers are Esquire 12 copies $3.33 instead of $5. Saturday Evening Post and the Ladies Home Journal sent to one address for 2 years at $2.50; Readers Digest 13 issues for the price of 12.

Last Wednesday we held a very special treat in assembly. It seems that Robert Estand has an unusual hobby, that of corresponding with a New Zealand student. Bob's most recent letter from his friend Collin Hardacre of Te Naraka, Gisborne, New Zealand, was read to us. To our surprise it revealed that this intelligent 16 year old New Zealand student had attended school only five years. It also indicated that New Zealanders have expected us to be in the war since early April.

THE BURDEN

SHAW AND MAYS HAVE 'UNFINISHED BUSINESS' TO SETTLE IN INDIANAPOLIS '500' MAY 30

WILBUR SHAW

REX MAYS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—"Unfinished business" is on the books as an extra bonus for the fans when Wilbur Shaw and Rex Mays meet again in the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on May 30.

Shaw, three-time winner of the great speed meet, ran off with first place last year but a lot of fans weren't satisfied that Shaw was the best in the field. Some believed that Mays, the California go-devil, would have beaten out Shaw had not a drizzle slowed the race down for 125 miles and prevented a last-stage battle between the two. The duel is expected to be finished this year.

No driver in the game has a heavier foot than Mays. He is one of the best pilots. But he drives hard, sparing his motor nothing and himself less. No one goes into the turns with greater abandon and no one shows more daring on the straightaways. Last year, just as in previous years, he was just about the hottest thing on the track in qualifying rounds. He won the pole position for the start and he was confident that his car had the stuff to step away from the field.

He took the lead early in the race and even when Shaw snatched it away he felt confident that when it came to a two-man battle in the final stages he would be the victor. And then, with Shaw leading by two laps, it began to rain. Out came the yellow flag telling the drivers not to better their positions. That went on for 125 miles, with Mays fuming impatiently. And that was how the race ended. Mays never did get a chance to battle it out with Shaw. Shaw won the race for the third time, joining Lou Meyer as the only three-time winner in history. Mays was second, the first time in six tries he ever completed the race, although he has been the fastest qualifier three of those six times. Mays feels that circumstance cheated him of victory and he intends to go all out for the winner's pot of gold this time.

While Mays has his plans, Shaw, the Dapper Dan of the track, a true champ, has before him the golden opportunity of becoming the first four-time winner in the history of the Indianapolis "500." Needless to say, both men will be out there gunning for all they're worth to realize their respective ambitions.

AAA GIVES "GREEN LIGHT" ON TOMATO PRODUCTION IN 1941

Will County growers have been given the "green light" to go ahead in expanding their production of tomatoes, sweet corn, peas and snap beans in response to the food-for-defense program according to Byron Gaskill Chairman of Will Co., ACA.

AAA provisions will be amended so that farmers will not incur deductions from their farm program payments because of increases made this year in acreage of tomatoes grown for processing and in the acreage of the other three crops.

A 50 percent increase has been asked for 1941 in the acreage of tomatoes for canning.

In general, the amendments will provide that:

(1) In determining compliance with vegetable acreage allotments in 1941, acreages of tomatoes, corn, peas, and snap beans grown for processing in any form will not be considered as commercial vegetables.

(2) Acreages of these four crops grown for processing will not be classified as soil-depleting in 1941. This change will enable growers in areas where total soil-depleting allotments are applicable to expand the acreages of these crops without incurring deductions from their payments.

... TO THE CLASS OF '41!
(See Recipes Below)

COMMENCEMENT TIME

You can't believe it, can you? Susie is graduating from high school!

In between putting the final stitches on her organdy dress and entertaining visiting friends and relatives, are you going to try to find time to give her a party?

Please do. To her, it's a very important time, and she'll undoubtedly remember the gang's "last real get-together" for the rest of her life.

Why not a buffet supper? What with wars raging elsewhere, you might play up the patriotic theme in decorations, refreshments and entertainment.

Use a white tablecloth, dotted with red and blue stars, and matching napkins—they're inexpensive and colorful. To top this off, use a trio of star-shaped red, white and blue candles for a centerpiece.

It won't be necessary for you to do much, except, of course, prepare the food. Games and chatter will fill up the evening. But remember that you have as guests youngsters with appetites. They like second helpings.

Serve an appetizer, one hot dish, plenty of salad and hot rolls, more cake or ice cream than you think you will possibly need, and flatter their sense of sophistication by offering second cups of coffee.

A fortune telling cake is always fun when the crowd is young and merry. You can write fortunes on slips of paper, roll them and wrap them in bits of waxed paper, and put them in the cake after it is baked. Another idea is to put in a little trinket for each guest—an engagement ring and a wedding ring, to forecast the first engagement and the first marriage; a key for happiness; a bean for industry; a toy soldier and so forth. You can buy these favors at the ten-cent store.

*Good Fortune Cake.

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
3 egg yolks, well beaten
¼ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks, then flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla and fold in egg whites. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375 degrees) 25 to 30 minutes. Double the recipe to make three 10-inch layers. Spread chocolate or maple frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake.

LYNN SAYS:

Games may or may not be the type of entertainment your crowd will enjoy. Just in case—here are a few suggestions:

As soon as guests arrive, they receive a card with the name of a food printed on it. Each player must then find someone with the card with the name that combines with the name on his own card. Suggested names are liver and bacon; apple pie and cheese; sauerkraut and wieners; brown bread and baked beans; ham and eggs; bread and butter; doughnuts and coffee; steak and onions; hot dogs and mustard. This game may be used in choosing supper partners.

Sardine—Some guest is chosen to be "It," and is given five minutes to hide in a spot large enough to hold several people. At the end of five minutes everyone else goes in search of "It." When one guest finds "It" he hides in the same spot and before long the hiding place is packed. The first person unable to squeeze in is "It."

THIS WEEK'S MENU

Graduation Party

All-American Appetizers
*Americana Salad
*Clover Leaf Rolls
*Veal on Skewers
*Good Fortune Cake
*Spiced Coffee
*Recipes given.

*Spiced Coffee.

6 cups decaffeinated coffee
½ cup whipping cream, whipped
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Top each cup of coffee with a spoonful of whipped cream into which the spices have been folded. Sugar may be served with the coffee, if desired. You can use your favorite method of making the coffee, with regular grind for percolated or boiled coffee and drip grind for drip or glass maker. Allow a heaping tablespoon for each cup. And if you "perk" it, give it a few minutes extra brewing to bring out its full flavor.

Now that I've made suggestions for dessert, I'll go back to the real beginning of your party.

While placing the supper foods on the table, Susie can pass a tray of appetizers, which are, after all, just a reminder of the good things yet to come. A tiny American flag placed in the center of the tray will add to the party theme.

Potato Chips au Gratin.

Spread crisp potato chips with pimiento cheese. Serve plain or with a thick slice of pickle in the center of each. Chips may also be sprinkled with grated American or Parmesan cheese. Before serving, put under broiler to melt cheese and heat chips.

Stuffed Celery.

Scrape deep stalks of celery. Cut into 3-inch lengths. Place in ice water to which lemon juice has been added. The celery may be placed in a covered jar in a refrigerator until crisp. Several types of filling may be used to add variety.

Bacon Snacks.

Wrap ½ slice bacon around a sweet pickle or stuffed olive and fasten with a toothpick. Broil until bacon is crisp and serve immediately.

One first glance at the salad will bring an enthusiastic response from the crowd. Illustrated in the picture at the top of the column, it is called

*Americana Salad.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
2 cups tomatoes
3 whole cloves
1 small bay leaf
1 small onion, chopped
½ teaspoon thyme
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon pepper or paprika
3 tablespoons vinegar

Stir gelatin and cold water together. Let stand at least 3 to 5 minutes. Meanwhile simmer tomatoes with seasonings in a covered container for 10 to 15 minutes. Strain and add vinegar. Dissolve the softened gelatin in this mixture, and pour into one large mold, and chill until firm. When it has set and is ready to serve, it is divided into two squares with layers which are joined together with a filling of cream cheese. A cream cheese star decorates the top. This recipe makes 6 portions.

Now for something truly different in the way of a hot dish—

*Veal on Skewers.

Cut boneless veal in pieces 1½ inches square by about ¾ inch thick. Stick on 8-inch metal skewers, alternating meat with slightly smaller peeled potato halves or cubes, chunks of carrot, and whole small white onions. Lay skewers in roasting pan, add 1 cup hot water, and salt. Cover and bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 1 hour, reduce heat to 350 degrees F., add more water if needed. Bake about 30 minutes longer, or until tender. Garnish with broiled bacon.

LUKE AND ELMER ON SACRIFICE

Luke—I suppose you've heard the President's warnings on the sacrifices every American man and woman will have to meet now that the all-out aid program is in full swing.

Elmer—Yes, and no truer word was ever spoken. But I doubt that more than one American in a thousand appreciates it.

Luke—I hope it don't come to a point where I have to stay home week-ends.

Elmer There you go! You're a typical case. You are one of the great army of Americans who don't mind sacrificing as long as it don't make 'em lay up the big car, shorten up the pleasure trips or cut down on the night club parties.

Luke—Ain't a guy got a right to his own idea of what a sacrifice means?

Elmer—Not up to the point where he thinks it's strictly a baseball term.

Luke—You don't expect people to go around demanding a chance to sacrifice, do you?

Elmer—Not yet, but I think it will be strictly a routine impulse before the year is over. Mr. Roosevelt gave a plain warning in strong language, but he people still need to be stirred up to a full appreciation of what it all really means. This country has been in an atmosphere of marathon waltzing, express speedways, de luxe settings, special upholstery and bottle feeding for so many years that too many people still think it's a sacrifice to get up the first time the alarm goes off instead of waiting for the repeat.

Luke—I guess maybe you're right. I know some fellers who would think they was making the sacrifice of a lifetime if they had to work twenty minutes overtime in even a soft job like judging a Miss America contest.

Elmer—And I could point out a lot of 'em who could applaud every word the President said on sacrifice and then set up a yelp if on their way downtown in an imperial limousine they got held up three minutes by a defense parade.

Luke—I read where some guy made a squawk the other day because a new defense aviation base was so close to his golf course that it made him nervous while putting.

Elmer—You can find plenty of people who think a major sacrifice is involved if the government gives priority to the shipment of bombers as against pool tables and electric music boxes.

THE PENCIL SHARPENER

You'll find this odd utensil in every office joint: It sharpens your pencil—And then breaks off the point!

—Merrill Chilcote

NEW IDEAS

for Home-makers

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

SMALL windows and bookshelves at the sides of a fireplace often create a monotonous series of rectangles. Watch out for them for they play an important part in decorating plans. You see them here in the small sketch—six of them—window; over-mantel space; window; bookshelves; mantel; bookshelves—around and around they go.

The only architectural change shown in the large sketch was a mantel facing built of three boards and simple mouldings. This broke up one rectangle. Irregular lines for swag drapes over the windows softened the angles of two more. A large picture or mirror over the mantel just added still another rectangle, so small prints were hung with ribbons. The arrangement of vines, books and bibelots on the shelves took care of the rest.

NOTE: Directions for cutting and making the swag draperies shown in today's sketch may be found on page 17 of Book 1, in the series of service booklets offered with these articles. Also book 7 is now ready for mailing. It contains more than 30 of these home-making ideas with step-by-step directions for each, as well as a description of the series. Booklets are 10 cents each and should be ordered direct from:
